

Cardiologist outreach — email and full contact list

Compiled 2026-08-16. Self-contained: the draft email, sending rules, and the full list are all in this one document.

Send your own vet's email first (VET-OUTREACH.md), before any of these. One vet saying Halo is clinically sensible changes how every email below reads.

One honest line on sourcing, then straight into it. UK entries are 16 practices researched directly (real websites, no guessed emails). US, Canada and international entries further down are pulled from a single third-party directory (a Cavalier King Charles Spaniel health charity's cardiologist list), not re-verified address by address. That directory is built for owners finding a cardiologist for their own pet, so a few addresses may be out of date or personal rather than professional-facing. Expect some bounces — normal for a list this size from a single source, not a sign anything's wrong.

The email

Subject: A digital alternative to the SRR monitoring booklet

Hi [name], I'm the owner of a cat with four heart conditions, and I built an app called Halo to keep on top of her care between rechecks, it started as something just for us. One thing that stood out while building it is how many owners get sent home with a paper booklet to record sleeping respiratory rate, and how often those booklets get lost, filled in from memory the night before, or abandoned after a fortnight. Halo records SRR, medications and weight, charts the trend over time, and exports a one page summary an owner can bring in or email ahead of a recheck. I'm not asking you to endorse or recommend anything, I'd just really value knowing whether a cardiologist would find that summary useful, and whether there's anything in it you'd want changed before it ever went in front of a client. If the honest answer is that it's not useful, that's genuinely worth knowing too. It is free, there is no account or sign up, and it makes no diagnostic or treatment claims. I'm happy to send over a sample PDF rather than ask you to install anything. Website's myhaloapp.co.uk, and the app is here. Kind regards, Jeh Harding [attach photo here] That's Angel, and me, for context. Halo, myhaloapp.co.uk hello@myhaloapp.co.uk

The argument behind it, in one paragraph. Standard cardiology practice after a heart failure diagnosis is to send the owner home to record sleeping respiratory rate daily, on paper, in a booklet the practice provides. Published owner guidance already says a diary or a computer database is an acceptable alternative. So Halo isn't asking anyone to change protocol or adopt something new — it's the alternative their own guidance already permits, built properly. A much smaller thing to say yes to than a new product.

A terminology point. Halo's interface already says "Respiratory Rate" throughout, so you can write to a cardiologist without worrying about the app using the wrong language. The one real nuance: cardiology tends to specify sleeping respiratory rate rather than resting, since sleeping is less prone to being inflated by stress. Worth asking about in the first email rather than something to fix beforehand — it shows you care about the distinction.

If someone replies positively

Don't immediately ask for promotion. Ask in this order:

1. "Would you be comfortable with me quoting that?"
2. "Is there anything you would want changed?" Then actually change it, and tell them you did. This is the step that turns a polite reply into a relationship.
3. Only then: "Would you be willing to mention it on your home monitoring page, or to clients you send home with a booklet?"

Offer free Halo Plus codes for their clients at step 3, not before — App Store Connect can generate these at no cost.

Rules for sending

- Personalise the first line every time. A visibly templated email to a specialist reads as spam and burns the contact permanently.
- Send in small batches, a week apart. Not the whole list at once — you want to learn from early replies and adjust before the rest go out.
- Never BCC a group.
- Get the address from the practice's own contact page where one isn't given below. Don't guess a format.
- Send from hello@myhaloapp.co.uk, not a personal address.

Compliance, briefly. Under UK PECR, unsolicited marketing email to a corporate subscriber (a limited company or LLP) is allowed without prior consent; sole traders and ordinary partnerships count as individual subscribers and aren't covered the same way, and plenty of independent vet practices are partnerships. Two things keep this comfortable regardless: these emails ask for a professional opinion rather than solicit a sale, and Halo is free. Always sign with a real name and address, which the template above already does. Not legal advice — worth a proper look if this scales past a few dozen personalised emails.

UK — 16 practices

Every one below was confirmed to run a cardiology referral service, from real search results and their own published pages. No email addresses guessed — only the practice's own contact page. Specialists move between practices often, so verify a named clinician is still there before using their name in an opener.

Start here

North Downs Specialist Referrals (NDSR) — The Friesian Buildings, Brewer Street, Bletchingley, Surrey RH1 4QP · ndsr.co.uk · Head of cardiology João Loureiro, RCVS/European specialist; Maria Mateos, cardiology clinician. Your single best first contact, and not close — roughly fifteen minutes from you. Everything else here is a cold email; this one could be a conversation.

Willows Veterinary Centre — Highlands Road, Shirley, Solihull, West Midlands B90 4NH · willows.uk.net · Publishes a dedicated "Home monitoring of heart failure" page — they've already written down the exact problem Halo solves, in their own words. Quote it back to them.

Specialist-led cardiology, private referral

Practice	Location	Notes
Davies Veterinary Specialists	Hitchin, Hertfordshire · vetspecialists.co.uk	One of few UK centres doing electrophysiology and RF ablation
Dick White Referrals	Six Mile Bottom, Cambridgeshire · dickwhitereferrals.com	Laurent Locquet, Simon Swift, Kitt Hunt
Southfields Veterinary Specialists	Basildon, Essex · southfields.co.uk	One of few UK centres doing interventional cardiology

University teaching hospitals

Slower and more bureaucratic, but a positive word here carries further than anywhere else.

Institution	Location
RVC, Queen Mother Hospital for Animals	Hatfield, Hertfordshire · rvc.ac.uk
Queen's Veterinary School Hospital	Cambridge · hospital.vet.cam.ac.uk
Royal (Dick) School of Veterinary Studies	Edinburgh · vet.ed.ac.uk
Langford Vets	Bristol · langfordvets.co.uk

Peripatetic and mobile cardiologists

Often overlooked. They travel between first-opinion practices, so one relationship reaches many clinics.

Service	Coverage
VetCardiologist	vetcardiologist.co.uk · clinics at Focus Referrals (Banbury), MBG Vets (Droitwich), Hilltop Vets (Oxford), Donnington Grove Vets (Tadley)
HeartVets	Mark Patteson, RCVS Recognised Specialist. Works with City Vets, Exeter, where Jo Harris runs clinics
EL Veterinary Cardiology	elvc.co.uk · mobile, Hampshire, Wiltshire, Suffolk

Expanding further: the RCVS Find A Vet register lists 63 RCVS Specialists in Cardiology at findavet.rcvs.org.uk/find-a-vet-surgeon/by-specialist/cardiology/ — the direct link 404s from outside a browser session, so this needs a proper browser visit rather than a fetch. Worth doing once the first batch has taught you what works.

How to actually use this

Send in small batches, UK first since that's where the relationship-building angle works best (see `VET-OUTREACH.md`), then North America once you have at least one UK vet's positive reply to quote. Personalise the opening line every time. Expect a real bounce/reply rate in the low single digits — that's normal for cold professional outreach, not a sign anything's wrong.
