

Vet outreach — your own vet

Drafted 2026-08-13.

Why this comes first, and alone

You do not yet have a single vet on record saying Halo is clinically sensible, and until you do, every other outreach email is weaker for it. Your own vet is the one place this doesn't have to be a cold email — you're a real client with a real patient, which no stranger's inbox can compete with.

This is shaped as a request for an opinion, not a pitch. Vets ignore pitches. They answer a client asking a genuine question.

Send this on its own, before anything else in the cardiologist or other-audiences lists.

The email — sent 2026-08-18, receptionist to forward to Paul and Farid

This is the actual version sent, kept here verbatim as the reference for tone going forward — see `[[feedback_email_tone_less_ai]]`.

Subject: A quick favour for Paul and Farid and something I built for Angel

Hi there, Would you be able to pass this on to Paul and Farid? They look after Angel and Yuumi Harding, and already know and have on record Angel's condition, so this will make more sense to them than most. Over the last year, I built an app to keep on top of Angel's care: medications, resting breathing rate, weight and a record of every appointment. It started as something just for us but figured it might help others too, so it's now live on the App Store. I'm not asking Paul or Farid to recommend it, I'm purely asking for their honest opinion on the app, as I do believe it can make a real difference to how this kind of care gets managed day to day. I will admit I have been told off myself for not logging Angel's breathing rate (BPM) often enough, so if something like this makes that easier to keep on top of, I am hoping it could help your team as well as us. It is free, and it deliberately makes no diagnostic or treatment claims, it is a record keeping tool and nothing more. If Paul or Farid would rather look at a PDF than install anything, I can send over the summary it generates for Angel. I would also really appreciate hearing what any other members of the Medivet team think of it, so please do feel free to pass it round. Use this link for the `[website]`(<https://myhaloapp.co.uk>), and this one for the `[App to download]`(<https://apps.apple.com/app/halo-pet-health/id6788889183>). Either way, thank you for everything you have done for Angel (and Yuumi). Kind regards, Jeh Harding

What to do with the answer

If it's positive, ask one follow-up: "Would you be comfortable with me quoting that?"

A single named vet saying Halo is sensible changes the tone of every email in the cardiologist and other-audiences outreach — it's the credibility that makes the rest of this work. See `CARDIOLOGY-EMAIL-LIST.md` and `OTHER-AUDIENCES-OUTREACH.md`.
